Star Twirler Assures Colonel Til Huston He Is Anxious to Help Put the Yankee Train Back on the Track to Pennantville; Saw Hun Surrender

By W. J. Macbeth

A very important cog of the machine with which Miller J. Huggins, chief engineer of the New York Yankees, hopes to start his train toward pennantville, was replaced yesterday afternoon in the recasting of Bob shawkey for service in this year of grace.

Bob, who, as able yeoman of the good battleship Arkansas, a unit of Rattle Squadron No. 6 of the Grand Allied Fleet, helped to keep the North safe for democracy while they were applying the pincers to the ruthas Hun, is scot free from all his patriotic obligations to Uncle Sam and simply pining away to take a crack at union hours once more as typified

Nine trips to South Africa. Eleven trips to New Zealand.

Eighteen trips to India. Twenty-three trips to England.

Twenty trips across the United States and Canada.

There may be some consolation in all this to billiard fans. It would appear that unless Mr. Benjamin is unusually gifted with the stuff that makes the grass grow he must be at about the end of his rope so far as
